Aug. 13. Ordinances made for the prosperity of the merchants of the king's Westminster. duchy of Aquitaine, as follows:—

All merchant vintners of the said duchy shall come under the king's protection to the realm of England and elsewhere within his power, with their wines and other merchandises, and shall trade in gross in the cities, boroughs and merchant towns, either with natives (indigenis) or inhabitants (incolis) of the said realm or with foreigners, strangers or private persons (privatis); and any merchandise, which they may bring to the said realm and power or there purchase or acquire in any way, they may take with them where they will and use as they will, after paying the due customs; excepting always wine, which they shall in no wise take without the said realm and power without the king's licence.

The said merchant vintners may lodge (hospitare) in the said cities and towns where they will, and tarry with their goods at the pleasure (ad gratum) of the owners of the inns (hospitia) or houses.

All contracts made by the said vintners with any person shall be good (firma et stabilis), so that neither merchant can recede therefrom, when once earnest money (denarius Dei) has been paid; and if upon such a contract any dispute arise, proof shall be made thereof according to the uses and customs of the fairs and towns, where the said contract was made.

The king remits to the said merchants of the duchy the old prise of two tuns of wine from each ship touching land within his realm or power, one from before the mast and the other from behind it; and further grants, for himself and his heirs, that he will not make that prise, or any other, of their wines and merchandises for any reason against their will without immediately paying the price at which the said merchants sell their wines or merchandises to others or making other satisfaction therefore, so that no valuation shall be set upon such wines or other merchandise by the king or his ministers.

As the seller of wine is bound to make up whatever is found to be lacking in each tun of wine when gauged, the purchaser in like manner shall be bound to pay for any surplus so found at the price of the wine in the tun.

As soon as ships with new wines touch (applicentur) within the king's realm and power, the old wines found in towns and other places shall be viewed and proved if they be sound (sana et incorrupta); and half the viewers of wines shall be merchant vintners of the said duchy and half good men of the town; and they shall be sworn to do their viewing faithfully and without fraud; and on the unsound wine they shall do justice as usual.

Whereas it has been the custom that the buyer and seller should pay 1*d.* for each tun for gauge (gaugeto), each paying $\frac{1}{2}$ d., this shall be done in future and observed as a custom.

All bailiffs and ministers of the fairs of the cities, boroughs and merchant towns shall do speedy justice from day to day without delay if they complain to them of wrongs, vexations (molestiis) or touching debts or other pleas, and the justice shall be according to the law merchant; if there be found any default (defectus) in the said bailiffs or ministers, whereby any of the said vintners have experienced delay, even though the vintner have recovered his losses against the principal party (partem in principali), nevertheless the said bailiff or minister shall be punishable by the king (versus nos puniatur), and this punishment is granted as a favour to the said merchant vintners to hasten the doing of justice to them.

In all kinds of pleas, saving in case of crime where the penalty is death, where a merchant vintner of the said duchy has been impleaded or have impleaded any one, whether the person so impleaded be a stranger (extraneus) or a private person (privatus), in fairs, cities or boroughs, where there are a sufficient number of merchant vintners of the said duchy, if an inquisition ought to be taken, half the inquisition shall be of such merchant vintners and half shall be of other good and lawful men of that place; and if there are not enough merchant vintners to be found, there shall be put upon the inquisition those of them, who shall there be found sufficient, and the remainder shall be of good and sufficient men of the place where the plea shall be.

No other exaction or charge (onus prestationis) shall be laid upon the wines of the said merchants.

Moreover the king specially ordains that the merchant vintners shall not lose any of the aforesaid liberties, which shall, however, only extend to merchant vintners of the said duchy.

And in return the said merchant vintners have granted the king that for every tun of wine which they shall bring within the king's realm or power, and for which they shall be bound to pay freight (frectum) to the sailors, beyond the ancient customs due and paid to the king or others they will pay by way of new custom 2s. within forty days from the discharge of the wine from the ships; and the said merchant vintners, when they have paid the said custom of 2s. for their wines in any place within the king's realm or power shall be quit of the said custom in every other place; provided that from all other merchandise carried on within the said realm they shall be bound to pay the customs due from other merchants for the same merchandise.

Whereas by a charter dated Lincoln, 12 February in the 29th year [see above, p. 2] the king granted to the abbot and convent of Holmcoltram a charter of liberties for their town of Skynburgh; and whereas the said abbot has informed the king that the greater part of the said borough and the road leading thereto has been so carried away by tempests of the sea, that men cannot go thither or dwell there as they were wont to do, and has petitioned the king to grant the same liberties to him at his town of Kirkeby Johannis, which is within the metes of the island of Holmcoltram, in lieu of the said town of Skynburgh;

the king has accordingly granted to the abbot and convent of Holmcultram that their town of Kyrkeby Johannis, in stead of Skynburgh, shall be a free borough with all the liberties previously granted to the town of Skynburgh including the market and fair on the same dates.

May 28. Whereas King Henry III granted to the church of St. Mary, Saresbury, Westminster. after its removal to New Saresbury, a charter of liberties for the said new 27 church and town [cf. Sarum Charters, p. 175], which charter the king has confirmed; and whereas, when Simon, now the bishop thereof, desired according to the above charter to take tallage from the citizens, when the king was lately tallaging his demesnes through England, the said citizens of the said city of New Saresbury, refused to accept the burden of such tallage; and whereas when prosecuted by the bishop before the king's council they were asked whether henceforth they would use and enjoy the liberties given them in the said charter and accept the burden of the said tallage in such cases, or renounce the said liberties and be quit of tallage in future; and they thereupon expressly renounced the said liberties upon that condition;

and whereas the king has considered that the said citizens in consideration of the advantage acquired by them by virtue of the said liberties from the time of the granting of them up to the date of the said renunciation ought to be tallaged upon this occasion, and that the tallage ought to be levied for the use of the bishop, and that the citizens ought not to enjoy in future the liberties contained in the said charter, which shall none the less remain in force so far as concerns the liberties therein contained which touch the bishop and canons; and whereas the said bishop and the said citizens have prayed the king of his special grace to grant that the said citizens should in future enjoy the liberties set forth above and by them renounced;

Inspecimus and approval of the following composition between the prior and convent of Holy Trinity, Norwich, and the bailiffs, citizens and community of the city of Norwich:—

From of old the prior and convent of Holy Trinity, Norwich, have claimed that a place in the city of Norwich, called le Tomelond, was their demesne, that they had the right of exercising the office of coroner and other royal offices there and in the streets of Ratonerowe, Holmestrete and Spittelond in Norwich, where their tenants reside, and that the said tenants could deal in all merchandise wholesale (mercandisare omnes grossas mercandisas) in those streets by and among themselves (per se et invicem), as others of the city elsewhere, without making any contribution or tallage with the citizens.

On the other hand the citizens claimed that the said place and all the aforesaid jurisdiction belonged to the city and its officers, and that the tenants of the priory dealing in merchandise as aforesaid ought to contribute with the said citizens.

Whereupon it has been agreed to the following effect by both sides:—

The place called Tomelond in the city of Norwich shall lie open and common (vacua et communis) at all times except at the time of the Whitsuntide fair of the said prior and convent there, so that the said place shall not be incumbered by the prior and convent or the citizens by holding a market or by placing dung or timber there, except that at the times of the synods of Norwich and on every Sunday in the year victuals and other small things may be bought and sold without the gates of the said priory church, which adjoin the said place, as has been done in times past; and that place by the view of the bailiffs of the prior and convent and of the bailiffs of the city about the feast of the Ascension next to come shall be measured and equally divided into four parts by placing fixed bounds lengthwise and across; and in time of fair there the citizens shall choose yearly the half they will of each quarter (cujuslibet quarterii) of the place, if they need as much, to place their shops and stalls upon, and that shall be held by them for the time of the fair quit of picage, stallage, toll and other custom, receivable by the said prior and convent; so that the citizens who may wish to have shops or stalls in the said fair shall come to that place every year on the Friday on the morrow of the Ascension and then first (primo) choose their places (portiones) for the time of the fair; and those places between the said Friday and the Tuesday next following before the setting of the sun at the latest they shall occupy, and thereafter no citizen shall claim any part of the said place, which has not been occupied, during the time of the ensuing fair, but any part of their share not so occupied shall remain to the prior and convent with all the remainder of the said place, to wit all the half, for them to make their profit of in all things belonging to the fair; provided that a part of the said place between the stone cross lately there set up and le Ratonerowe in breadth and from the cross directly to the wall of the priory in length during the said fair shall not be occupied by stalls or shops but shall be open for access to the gates of the priory, and also for the sale and purchase of oxen and other beasts; nor shall that part be used in any other manner by the prior and convent or by the citizens. And if the citizens in choosing their places for their stalls or shops occupy more than the half of the said quarters, the prior and convent shall take back into their hands what they find to be so occupied, and shall assign it to whom they will for the time of the fair and make their profit of it otherwise as they will. But at the end of the fair, that is at sun-set on Monday, the morrow of Holy Trinity, the citizens shall remove their shops and stalls from the said place.

The prior and convent yearly at the time of the said fair and through all the said city and its suburb shall have all the jurisdictions belonging to the fair, so that their bailiffs and ministers appointed to keep the said fair shall make distrainments, attachments, and do all else pertaining to the said fair within the circuit of the city and the suburb thereof, just as the bailiffs and under-bailiffs of the city do without the time of the fair. And all of the said city shall be liable to summons, attachment, distraint and amercement in the court of the said fair belonging to the said prior and convent and shall be subject to the ministers of the said prior and convent throughout the said fair and shall answer to them in pleas and inquisitions, when any matter belonging to the law of fairs (jus feriarum) requires. At the end of the said fair the citizens shall resume the said jurisdictions, to be discharged by their own ministers, and from that time there as elsewhere in the city shall discharge during the remainder of the year the customs and royal offices belonging there to them, demanding and receiving what is just. All prisoners, who may be in the prison of the prior and convent by reason of their jurisdiction in the fair at the end of the fair or on the next day shall be sent to the king's prison in the city with the reasons for which they were arrested, and shall there be delivered to the bailiffs of the city to be kept by them until they shall be delivered by the law and custom of the realm; and if the said prisoners afterwards before the bailiffs of the city or the king's justices undergo judgement whereby they ought to loose life or limb, the ministers of the prior and convent shall have the execution of the same.

Touching the exercise of the office of coroner within the precinct of the priory or in the streets of Holmestrade and Spittelond in Norwich, it is agreed that whenever any misfortune shall happen in those places calling for the exercise of the office of coroner, the coroner of the city shall do what is needful, provided that he have with him the steward of the said prior and convent or any other whom the prior, or any holding that place, may assign, who shall sit with the coroner during the discharge of his office and shall hear and see all that is done, to the end that nothing shall be done there by the coroner falsely or maliciously, but all shall be done rightfully and according to law and the custom of the realm; the enquiry shall be made by the parishioners of the said places and not by others; nor shall the parishioners of the said places be bound to appear without the said streets to make any inquisitions before the coroner or bailiffs of the city; nor shall dwellers in the precinct of the priory be called upon to make inquisitions before the said coroner in Holmestrate and Spittelond or elsewhere without the priory. When such inquisitions have been made, he who sits on the part of the prior shall at once have a copy of the inquisition to be delivered to him by the coroner, indented, closed with the coroner's seal, and sufficiently examined between them, in order that no suspicion shall arise in future. The said assessor, when he comes to the coroner, before he hear any of the matter to be enquired into, shall make oath to the coroner not to reveal any secrets of the king's, which may there arise. And the coroner, before he comes to do his office, shall give sufficient warning to the prior to send one of his men to sit with him; and if after sufficient warning the prior send no one, the coroner shall proceed to do his office without further delay, saving always the ecclesiastical privilege (jure).

The prior and convent shall hold their leets in the streets of Holmestrate and Spittelond without the presence of the bailiffs of the city and their courts also with all things belonging to the said courts and leets. The bailiffs of the city or the citizens shall not intrude to hold any plea before them of any tenement within the close of the priory, nor of goods or chattels within the priory nor of summonses, distrainments, or attachments, saving only as concerns the office of coroner. Nor shall the prior and convent receive or maintain anyone within the priory, whom the bailiffs of the city ought for any cause to take or attach by his body, so that they shall be impeded in the discharge of their duty, unless it be in a case wherein ecclesiastical liberty ought to protect or maintain the person in question. At any time of the year, if anyone be taken or arrested at the suit of anyone with the mainour (cum manu opere latrocinii) in the streets of Holmestrate or Spittelond, and if justice can be had thereof in the court of the prior and convent, the bailiffs of the city shall not interfere; but if the person so taken shall not be so justiciable, the bailiffs shall do what they think right therein. And if the person so delivered to them shall afterwards be condemned before the said bailiffs or the king's justices for gaol-delivery, the bailiffs of the prior and convent shall have the execution of the judgement; and the chattels of the persons so arrested shall remain in the keeping of the parishioners of the said streets, until it shall be determined in the eyre of the justices or in the king's court to whom the chattels ought to remain; and if aught in the leets of the prior shall be presented touching any man of the city or any other who is not properly distrainable by the prior and convent, and justice thereof can be had by the king's ministers of the city, extracts of such presentations on the day after the holding of the said leets shall be delivered to the bailiffs of the city by the bailiffs of the prior and convent to do what justice requires therein; and likewise if in any of the king's leets in the city before the bailiffs of the city a presentation be made touching anyone of Holmestrete and Spittellond, who is not properly distrainable by the bailiffs of the city and justice thereof can be had by the ministers of the prior and convent, extracts of such presentations on the day after the holding of the said leets shall be delivered to the bailiffs of the prior and convent to do what justice requires therein.

The citizens shall not impede the prior and convent from exacting, receiving and having the amercements of their men and the chattels of felons and fugitives, pursuant to the king's charters.

If any of the tenants or farmers of the prior and convent of Ratonerowe be in the leet of the prior and convent, as in Holmestrete and Spittellond, he shall not be compelled to be in the king's leet in Norwich, otherwise he shall be put in the king's leet in Norwich; and if any man of Ratonerowe be amerced before the bailiffs of Norwich, the amercement shall go to the prior and convent, and estreats thereof shall be delivered to the bailiffs of the prior and convent four times in each year at the feasts of All Saints, the Purification, the Ascension and the Assumption.

No one of the household (familia) of the prior and convent shall deal in merchandise wholesale (grossas mercandisas exercere) within the precinct of the priory, lest the king or the bailiffs of the city lose their custom.

The tenants of the prior and convent dwelling within the streets of Holmestrete and Spittellond shall not be distrained there by the bailiffs of the city to answer before them; saving that the bailiffs of the city shall exercise the royal offices there touching the dwellers in those streets or foreigners coming together there in all things, wherein the prior and convent cannot have any jurisdiction, pursuant to the king's charters.

The men (residentes) of the prior and convent within the streets of Holmestrete and Spittellond, trading wholesale there and not elsewhere in the city, shall not be bound to make any contribution to any aid to be assessed by the said citizens for any cause touching the commonalty of the city. But others dwelling there and trading wholesale there or elsewhere in the city shall be bound to contribute according to the quantity of their trade (mercandisarum) to reasonable aids to be assessed by the assent of all the commonalty or the greater part thereof for the protection and advantage of the city. But the bailiffs of the city shall not enter these streets for this cause to distrain or vex the dwellers there; and when it happens that any one dwelling in the streets of Holmestrete and Spittellond and trading wholesale there among the citizens of the city is assessed (agistari) according to the quantity of his trade and will not pay his share to the said aids, since he is not distrainable by the bailiffs, the prior shall be informed so that he may be distrained to pay his share by the prior's bailiffs; and if he, while thus trading, will not satisfy the citizens, the prior may retain in his own hands the said distraint to the value of the said share during a period of fifteen days; and if in that time the trader (mercator) satisfy the citizens of his share, the distraint shall be returned to him by the prior, otherwise the prior shall deliver it to the bailiffs of the city; and if he fail to do so, the bailiffs may acquire it according to the judgement of the king's court.

Inquisitions to be taken in the time of the fair of the prior and convent touching the citizens shall be taken from those parts of the city where the contracts or trespasses arose, unless those of those parts are connected with the parties pleading by any affinity or any of them be summoned as witnesses named in bonds or other like cases (vel cum contigerit aliquos testes nominatos in scriptis obligatoriis vel casibus consimilibus summoneri).

If either of the parties to this agreement contravene it to the damage of the other, the party so damaged may seek (impetrare) such remedy as the king's court shall adjudge, notwithstanding this agreement.

Sealed in duplicate by both parties. Dated at Norwich, Saturday after the feast of St. Katharine the Virgin, in the 35th year of Edward I incipiente. Quadruplicatur.

Inspecimus and confirmation of a charter dated at Kempton, 20 May, 33 Edward I. in favour of the dean and chapter of St. Peter's, York [see above p. 56]; with further grant to the following effect:—

Whereas in the charter of King Henry III, cited above, it is contained that if the dean and chapter and the canons or their men shall be engaged in any plea with others or among themselves, the plea shall be taken and heard in the door (hostio) of the church of St. Peter, saving pleas of the crown, which shall be heard in the house of one of the canons without the grave-yard as has been used hitherto;

the king, although there is no express mention as to the persons by whom the pleas other than those of the crown ought to be heard in the door of the said church, and in as much as the dean and chapter assert that they have been prevented from having such pleas and from hearing them by their stewards in the said door according to custom, since the date when the justices of King Edward I of both benches, whether assigned to hold pleas before the king or common pleas, lately sat at York and because of the neighbourhood (vicinitatem) of the place heard such pleas moved before them in the said benches in the door (hostio) of the said church, yet wishing to show special grace to the dean and chapter has granted that all pleas other than those of the crown touching the said dean and chapter and canons or their men in the said benches shall be sent to the dean and chapter by the justices and shall be heard by the steward of the dean and chapter in the door of the said church, as was formerly done;

with further grant that no non-user in the past shall prejudice the dean and chapter in their enjoyment of any of the foregoing liberties.

1. A charter, dated at Westminster, 26 February, 36 Henry III.
[Calendar, Vol. I, p. 379.]
 2. A charter, dated at Windsor, 17 May, 40 Henry III, whereby that king, for the betterment of the city of York and at the instance of the citizens, granted that they and their heirs should have the following liberties.
None of them shall plead or be impleaded before the king or any of his justices without the said city touching lands or tenements, which they hold within the liberty of the said city, or of any trespass done in the said city; but if any of the said citizens or any other wish to sue for any land or tenement within the said liberty or to complain of any trespass done therein, he shall pursue his right or plaint before the mayor and bailiffs of the said city; and if the matter cannot there be determined, it shall be determined at the suit of the plaintiff (querentis) before the king's justices next in eyre within the city and not without it, or before any of the king's justices specially sent therefore;

the said citizens shall not be convicted by any foreigners on any appeals, indictments (rettis), wrongs, trespasses, charges (criminibus), claims or demands laid or to be laid upon them, but only by their fellow citizens, unless the community of the city shall be to blame for any of the foregoing or the matter shall touch the community and in that case the citizens shall be dealt with (deducantur) according to their liberties approved and hitherto used :

the said citizens shall not answer for any land or tenement within the said liberty or for any trespass done therein before any justice in eyre at York elsewhere than in their Gildhall, and this on certain days of which they shall be warned by the said justices :

the citizens and their heirs by their own hand shall answer at the exchequer for all debts touching them and the city ; and they shall be dealt with in their accounts at the exchequer according to the laws and customs of the exchequer, as sheriffs in England are treated in their accounts there ; and they shall have the said city with all its appurtenances, as they have hitherto held it, with all the laws, liberties, and customs, of their lands and tenements within the said city and without, which they had hitherto, with all the other liberties, laws, uses and customs, which they have hitherto made use of in the said city ;

witnesses, Guy de Lecyniac, and William de Valencia, the king's brothers, Robert Walerand, Henry de Mara, Henry de Bratton, Nicholas de Turry, William de Grey, Master John Maunsel, Waukelin de Aerderne, Bartholomew le Bygod, William de Sancta Erminia, Philip de Boklund ; given by the king's hand.

3. A charter dated at Windsor, 18 May, 40 Henry III, whereby the king granted to the citizens of York that through all the king's realm and power they and their goods, wherever found, shall not be arrested for any debt whereof they are not sureties or principal debtors, unless the debtors be of their commune and power, having wherewith to satisfy the debt in whole or in part, and the said citizens have failed to do justice to the creditors, who can prove such failure ; witnesses, as above ; given by the king's hand.

4. Letters patent dated at Windsor, 9 March, 46 Henry III. [Patent Roll, m. 14.]

and although in certain of the said charters it is contained that 'all the citizens shall be quit of toll, pontage, passage, and all customs throughout England and all the king's power,' and also that 'no citizen shall plead or be impleaded before the king or any of his justices without the said city touching lands or tenements which they hold within the said city nor of any trespass done in the said city ; but if any of the said citizens or any other wish to sue for any land or tenement within the said liberty or to complain of any trespass done therein, he shall pursue his right or plaint before the mayor and bailiffs of the said city ; and if the matter cannot there be determined, it shall be determined at the suit of the plaintiff before the king's justices next in eyre within the city and not without it or before any of the king's justices specially sent therefore.'

yet nevertheless the said citizens complain of many customs exacted from them in diverse places within the king's power, because those customs are not expressed in the said charters, and also that they are wearied by reason of assizes, juries and inquisitions as well in pleas of lands and tenements in the said city and its suburbs (suburbiis) as of trespasses done therein ;

wherefore the king, wishing to show grace to the citizens and in consideration of a fine made with him, has granted to them that they,

their heirs and successors, shall be quit of murage, pavage, skewyng, stallage, wharfage, terrage, putage and heyage through all his realm and power; and also that they shall not be put upon assizes, juries or inquisitions without the city by reason of any lands or tenements within the said city and suburbs or by reason of any trespass done therein; and has also granted that no marshall of the king's judges in eyre at York shall assign (liberationem faciat) to anyone of the houses or lodgings (hospiciis) in the city and suburbs during the eyres of the said justices against the will of the owners of the said houses and lodgings, saving for the justices themselves and their necessary servants; moreover all persons dwelling (habitantes) in the said city and suburbs and trading there, wishing to enjoy the liberties granted to the said citizens by former kings of England and by the present king shall be in the gild, lot and scot with the citizens in tallages and all other charges falling on the community of the city for the king's advantage or for the utility of the city; provided that all this shall be without prejudice to any other person.

Pursuant to an inquisition, taken by William de Ormesby and John de Thorpe, finding that every sheriff of the county of Norfolk has been accustomed to receive from every prisoner taken at Bishop's Lynn (Lenne Episcopi) and brought to the castle of Norwich 14*d.* for entrance to the said castle of the fee of the said castle, which sum is estimated at 3*s.* 6*d.* yearly, and which the king would lose, if he were to grant that John, bishop of Norwich and his successors should have their own prison in the said town for judging (justiciandis) and detaining thieves (latronibus) and other evil-doers there taken; and finding also that it would be for the king's good that there should be a prison in that town, because thieves and other evil-doers indicted (indictati et reitati) for thefts and other trespasses in that town for lack of such a prison have escaped and their ill-deeds remained unpunished, whereby foreign and native merchants have withdrawn themselves from the said town to its great loss; and also pursuant to the finding of the said inquisition that it is not to the damage of the king or any one else if the king grant to the said bishop that he and his successors should have return of all the king's writs touching the said town and the men there both of tenements there and of trespasses, contracts and other matters arising within the same town;

grant, for good service rendered by the said bishop both at home and abroad, and in consideration of his great charges therein, and because the king desires to favour the church of Holy Trinity, Norwich, and to honour it in the person of the said bishop, that the said bishop and his successors shall have a prison in the said town for felons, thieves and other evil-doers, who may happen to be arrested in the said town, to be therein judged, detained and kept until they shall be delivered according to the law and custom of the realm; and that the king shall send his justices to the said town, as often as needful, to deliver the said prison of those who shall there be detained; provided that the said bishop and his successors shall render yearly to the sheriff of Norfolk 4*s.* for his farm, in lieu of the 14*d.* receivable from each prisoner as aforesaid; and also that the said bishop and his successors shall have return of all the king's writs touching the said town of Lenne and the men there of tenures in the said town and of trespasses, contracts and other matters, and that they shall execute the said writs by their bailiffs and ministers without impediment from the king and his ministers.

5. A chirograph, being an agreement between the masters and scholars of the University of Cambridge and the burgesses of Cambridge. [Ibid. Prynn, Records, III, p. 465.]

with further grant of special grace to the Chancellor, masters and scholars of the university of Cambridge that they shall not be impeded in their enjoyment of the aforesaid grants by reason of any non-user in the past; and that they shall have within the said town and suburb the following liberties;

firstly, that whereas King Henry III granted that no regrater should buy victuals in the town of Cambridge or without while coming to the town, or should buy anything to sell again before the third hour, upon pain of amercement according to the quality and quantity of the offence, it is hereby granted that in addition to the aforesaid penalty the offender shall lose the thing bought;

moreover, whereas the said king granted that if a layman should seriously injure a clerk, he should at once be taken, and, if the injury were great, imprisoned in the said town and detained until reasonable satisfaction had been made to the said clerk, and that if a clerk should seriously injure a layman, he should be imprisoned, until the chancellor of the university demanded him, the king now wills that the same course be had in cases of slight trespass; and if the chancellor of the university shall believe that the persons so to be imprisoned are improperly kept, the keepers of such prisoners at the request of the chancellor or of any master deputed by the chancellor shall allow the said chancellor or master to view the said prisoners and the manner of their imprisonment, as often as may be needful or the chancellor think fit, and any defect or excess in such imprisonment shall be corrected at the complaint (denunciationem) of the chancellor;

moreover, clerkshaving a lay fee and studying at Cambridge, so long as they adhere to their studies there, and are proficient in clerical habit in their study, shall not be placed upon assizes, juries or recognitions; moreover, if a scholar of the university in the said town or suburb be slain, or seriously injured by a layman, and the bailiffs of the town be negligent in the discharge of their duty in the matter, whereby the said bailiffs and the commonalty of the town ought to be amerced, the commonalty shall be amerced by themselves, and the bailiffs by themselves; and in like manner whenever the mayor and bailiffs of Cambridge shall make oath of fealty in their common place, the commonalty of the town shall warn the chancellor that he may be present at the making of that oath on a fixed day, if he wish, which oath shall be to the following effect, so far as the scholars are concerned, to wit that the mayor and bailiffs will preserve the liberties and customs of the university touching the preservation of the king's peace and of the assize of bread of ale and of victuals, and will not impugn the other liberties of the university unduly or maliciously, so far as they have knowledge of them; otherwise their oath shall not be valid and shall be made again in the said form; but if the chancellor being so warned shall not attend, the oath shall be made none the less; and if any burgess shall knowingly receive or keep hidden any one of his household who has seriously injured or wronged a scholar or any of a scholar's men, so that the trespasser cannot be found to be chastised, the burgess shall answer for the member of his household, and none the less shall be punished for his offence against the king;

moreover, whereas in the charter of King Henry III it is contained that whenever a trial (temptatio) of bread and ale ought to be made, the chancellor of the university or someone thereto appointed shall be present, if when questioned as to this they wish to be present, but that if they are not present and have [not] been questioned thereon, the trial shall not hold good, the king wills that when henceforth (ex nunc) the trial ought to be made by the said burgesses, on the day before notice shall be given privately to the chancellor or his deputy to be present, if he wish, at the said trial by himself or by persons appointed for the purpose, who in the presence of the chancellor before those giving the said notice, if they wish to be present, shall make oath not to reveal the said warning or trial to any one before the making of the said trial, and that they will further demean themselves well and faithfully in the said matter, so far as it touches them.

Whereas Henry I among other things granted to the abbot and convent of St. Edmunds that the soke (sokna) of eight hundreds and a half should fully belong (adjaceret) to the monastery of St. Edmund on all days with all liberties, dignities and forfeitures belonging to the crown, which soke King Edward gave to St. Edmund in alms, as fully as he held it in his hand, and the charter, which the said Henry saw, he also confirmed, all the which several of the king's progenitors have confirmed, and the king has also confirmed them and granted to the abbot and convent that even if they have not enjoyed the liberties so granted to them hitherto, they shall do so in the future as is contained more fully in the king's charter; and whereas the said abbot and convent have been impeded in the king's court touching the receiving of certain fines of their men and tenants within the said eight hundreds and a half, which they affirmed to belong to them by reason of the grant of King Henry I and the subsequent confirmations, on the ground that there was no express mention of the receiving of such fines in the said grant and confirmations;

the king, out of devotion to St. Edmund, and special affection to the abbot and convent, being willing to provide for their security and to declare what without express mention is contained in general words in the grants of the king and his predecessors, has granted to the said abbot and convent that they and their successors shall have all the fines of their men and tenants as well of others' fees (feodis alienis) as of their own within the said eight hundreds and a half anywhere in the king's courts and for whatever reason the said fines are imposed.

Inspecimus and confirmation of a charter dated at Berwick upon Tweed, 23 June, 19 Edward I [Calendar, Vol. II, p. 402, No. 30], inspecting and confirming with additions the following charters in favour of the burgesses of Ipswich:—

1. A charter, dated at Roche d'Orival, 25 May, 1 John. [Rotuli Chartarum, p. 65.]

2. A charter, dated at Westminster 15 April, 40 Henry III. [Calendar, Vol. II, p. 402, No. 30.]

with further grant that the said burgesses shall not be impeded in their enjoyment of the aforesaid liberties by reason of any non-user in the past; and that they shall have the following liberties.

Whereas in the said charter of King John it is contained that none of the said burgesses shall plead without the borough of Ipswich any plea except pleas of foreign tenures saving the ministers of the said king, and that right shall be done them of their tenures and lands within the borough according to the custom of the borough of Ipswich and the free boroughs of the said king, for the fuller declaration hereof the king grants that none of them shall plead or be impleaded without the said borough of any pleas, assizes or plaints, nor of lands and tenures within the said borough or its suburb, nor of any trespasses committed or contracts made within the liberty of the said town, and that as often as assizes, juries or inquisition shall be taken touching internal (intrinsecis) holdings or trespasses, contracts or felonies committed within the said town or liberty, the said assizes, juries or inquisitions shall nowise be made by foreigners but by burgesses of the said town, unless the matter or deed touch the king or the community of the town.

Again, whereas in the same charter it is contained that the burgesses of the said borough by common counsel of the township shall choose two of the lawful and discreet men of the town and present them to the chief justice of the king at the Exchequer, which two men are to keep the office of reeve (preposituram) of the said town, by virtue whereof the said burgesses are bound to present two men so chosen by themselves at the king's Exchequer, the king now grants that they shall be discharged of the making of such presentation and not be bound thereto.

And whereas in the said charter it is contained that in the said borough by the common council of the burgesses there shall be chosen four of the lawful and discreet men of the borough to keep the pleas of the crown and other things belonging to the crown in the said borough and to see that the Reeves of the borough deal rightly and lawfully with both the poor and the rich, the king wills that henceforth the burgesses shall be bound to choose two such men only.

And whereas in the charter of King Henry III it is contained that the burgesses may choose from themselves coroners to make the attachments of the pleas of the crown arising within the said city and liberty, and that they shall answer before the king's justices in eyre in those parts of such attachments and of other things pertaining to the office of coroner as other coroners answer, and the said burgesses have in pursuance chosen four coroners, the king wills that henceforth they shall only elect two coroners of themselves in succession (successive) as need shall be, and that those two shall be admitted to do all the aforesaid things.

And whereas the said burgesses have hitherto had the keeping of the prisoners indicted or arrested in the said borough and suburb and have answered for the escape of such prisoners, when it has occurred, the king wills that no one indicted in the said borough or in the liberty thereof or there taken or arrested there for any reason shall be imprisoned elsewhere than in the king's prison of the liberty of the borough, but such persons shall be kept there by the bailiffs of the city until they shall be thence delivered according to the law and custom of the realm, unless they be removed thence on reasonable cause by the king's special precept or by that of the keeper of the forest for the time being, if they are charged with any trespass of the forest.

And the said burgesses shall be quit of murage, pavage, picage, anchorage, strandage and 'seygagio' of all their goods and merchandise through all the king's realm and power and through all sea ports.

And none shall go to meet merchants or others coming to the same town with goods and merchandise by land or sea to give earnest (arrandum) or buy, until the said goods and merchandise shall have been brought to a place within the town appointed for their sale, there to be exposed for sale; nor shall any forestalling of such goods be made under heavy penalty to the king.

Si qua vero terra post diem facte conventionis in proprietatem abbatis et monasterii sui venerit, episcopus Wintoniensis in ejus sepulturis vel corporibus nil clamabit, nisi prius ecclesia episcopalis ea per consuetudinem habuit. Inspeximus and confirmation of a charter dated at Norham, 12 June, 19 Edward I [Calendar, Vol. II, p. 401] inspecting and confirming a charter dated at Westminster, 2 January, 26 Henry III, in favour of the citizens of Cork. [Calendar, Vol. I, p. 266.]

With the further grant that the said citizens and their heirs shall not be impeded in their enjoyment of the said liberties by reason of any non-user in the past ;

and, whereas the citizens in times past have yearly chosen one of themselves to be mayor, and the said mayor so chosen has made oath to his predecessor in office before the community of the said city in the king's name, unless the justiciary of Ireland or any baron of the Exchequer of Dublin has been present in the said city at the time of the election, for which the citizens have been impeached several times in the king's court by his ministers, affirming that the oath ought to be made in the Exchequer of Dublin and not elsewhere ; the king for the reason that the cities of Cork and Dublin are far apart, so that if any war or rebellion of the Irish happen, there is no safe passage between them, has granted to the said citizens that their mayor chosen each year from among them shall make his due oath before his predecessor in office in the presence of the community of the city unless as aforesaid, as has hitherto been used ; moreover the citizens shall have the following liberties ; return of all the king's writs as well of summonses as of attachments of all matters arising within the said city and suburb, so that the king's ministers of Ireland shall not enter the said city or suburb of Cork to make any summonses or attachments or executions in ought there arising save in case of default of the mayor and bailiffs of the city, save in the case of four pleas, to wit rape, arson, forstal and treasure trove, which shall remain to the king and his ministers ; and in any pleas arising within the said city the citizens shall not be convicted by foreigners but only by their fellow citizens, unless the matter touch the king or his ministers or the community of the city ; and they shall be quit through all the king's realm and power of murage, pavage, carriage and quayage ; and they shall not be put upon assizes, juries or recognitions without the said city or suburb by reason of their lands and tenements without the city or within it, so long as they are dwelling in the said city or suburb, so that they may attend to their merchandise and business more quietly ; and of their lands and rents within the city of Cork and its suburb recognitions shall be made in the king's court before the mayor and bailiffs by the king's writs of the chancery of Ireland, and these recognitions shall have as much force as such recognitions of lauds, tenements and rents in the city and suburb of London taken in the king's court of London by the king's writ have been wont to have ; and the mayor and bailiffs of the city of Cork shall have the keeping of the assize of bread and ale and the trial of weights and measures in the said city and suburb, so that none of the king's ministers of Ireland shall intermeddle therein, unless it be in the presence of the justiciary of Ireland or the keeper of the said country within the said city, who, if any plaint be made touching any default of the keeping of the assize and trial aforesaid, shall cause the same to be surveyed and examined and shall correct any defects therein and punish offenders; saving that the king's ministers of the market in the said country once a year, if they will, may enter the said city and suburb and discharge in due course all that belongs to their office. Whereas King Edward I in consideration of the losses caused to the barons of the town of Old Wynchelse within the king's Cinque Ports by the destruction of that town by the sea appointed John de Kirkeby, then bishop of Ely, and others to make an extent of certain sites (placeas) in the king's soil at La Mote and to assign them to the said barons at certain rents in the manor set out in the said extent made by them [Rentals and Surveys, Roll 674, from Simon le Machon on m. 1 to Robert de Cantuaria on m. 4d (See next charter)], and whereas some of the said sites since the said assignment have come to the seisin of diverse persons by inheritance or purchase or otherwise without any charter being obtained from the king ;

the king, at the request of the barons now holding the said sites, has granted to them that they may hold the said sites under the same forms and conditions in which they now hold them at the aforesaid rents to be rendered to the king and his heirs yearly by the hands of the bailiffs of the said town ; and also that they shall have in the said town all the liberties and free customs which the barons of the said old town of Wynchelse had in the said town before its destruction and which other barons of other towns of the said Cinque Ports have by charters granted to them, and that they may enjoy them without impediment. Inspeximus and confirmation of a charter of Richard I in favour of the abbot and canons of Cyrencestre, dated at Oissel, 20 June, 9 Richard I. [See Calendar, Vol. I, p. 145, and Rotuli Chartarum, p. 10, for the words of the Charter.] of the manor of Cirencestre and the town of Minthi in the sixth year of the king's reign, when the king's demesnes were tallaged throughout England; and the abbot asserted that under the foregoing charter the said tallage ought to belong to him, and on the other hand it was alleged for the king that the said tallage belonged to the king because there was no mention of such a tallage in the said charter; which matter was at first discussed in the Exchequer and afterwards on account of certain difficulties sent to divers parliaments by the king's order, and afterwards remitted to the Exchequer for final discussion;

wherefore the king, considering that his progenitor by the said charter gave to St. Mary and the said canons all the said manor of Cirencestre and the town of Minthi and the seven hundreds and willed that they should have the said manor with all liberties and free customs as the said progenitor held it, when it was in his hand, excepting only the pleas of the crown and the forest of Minthi, and desiring to provide for the security of the said abbot and convent in this behalf, has thought fit to grant to the abbot and convent the said tallage; and has further granted that whenever the king or his heirs shall tallage their demesnes throughout England, the said abbot and canons may take a reasonable tallage in the aforesaid manor and town. was granted that no secular person or minister of the king should intermeddle with the borough of St. Edmund or the men dwelling in it except the said abbot and convent; and whereas at the suggestion of the abbot and convent who affirm that they have been put in question by the king's ministers touching divers liberties which they have made use of by virtue of these general words, and pray that the king should specifically declare by charter the liberties which they have hitherto used in quiet;

the king wishing to be informed touching the said liberties has appointed John de Mutford and John Claver to take an inquisition touching the foregoing in the presence of the sheriff of Suffolk and has also ordered William de Bereford, chief justice of the Bench, to examine the rolls and memoranda of the Bench and to inform the king in his chancery if cognizance of pleas moved in that bench touching the abbot and his men and tenants have been allowed or not;

and whereas now by the inquisition taken and returned into Chancery it is found that the said abbot and his predecessors from time out of mind have had the cognizance of all pleas both those touching the abbot and his men and tenants of the said borough, to wit of pleas of lands, tenements, agreements, contracts, trespasses and plaints and all others within the said borough in any way arising, whether by writs of the king before any justices or ministers of the king or without writs so that (absque eo quod) no justices for holding pleas before the king, justices of the bench, justices itinerant or to take assizes, to deliver gaols, or to hear and determine felonies or trespasses, stewards, marshals, clerks of the market of the household, escheators, sheriffs, coroners, taxers, collectors, ulnagers or other ministers of the king have intermeddled in the said borough or with the men there dwelling in any way or have ever sat within the borough to hold any pleas there or take inquisitions or do aught else there; and that it is not to the damage of the king or of any other or to the diminution of the farm of the county if the king specify such liberties in a charter and grant them to the said abbot and convent for himself and his heirs;

and whereas by a certificate from the said chief justice returned into the chancery it is in like manner found that such cognizances of pleas have been allowed to the said abbot in the time of Edward I and the present king;

the king, out of devotion to St. Edmund and special affection to the said abbot and convent, has granted, for himself and his heirs, to them and their successors, cognizance of all such pleas whether arising in the king's presence or his absence, unless they specially touch the king's person, so that no justice or other minister as aforesaid shall intermeddle in the said borough or with the men there dwelling or sit there to hold pleas, take inquisitions or to do aught else, unless as aforesaid the pleas touch the king's person.
